

COMMUNITY HEALTH WORKER Self-Care & Support

The National Association of Community Health Workers (NACHW) implemented a Community Health Worker (CHW) survey in 2021 to advance the national professional identity, policy leadership and organizational capacity of CHWs in the United States. This infographic highlights responses to our national survey from 867 CHWs (772 English and 95 Spanish respondents) from 859 unique zip codes.

This infographic explores CHWs self-care practices, and experiences with support with employers, coaching and mentorship and experiences of safety and belong in promoting personal and professional well-being.

Implementing cultural practices and norms among employers leads to more effective, mindful, and attuned work. Health CHWs promotes quality care and support among community thereby elevating community health and well-being.

I receive support for my self-care and mental health where I work

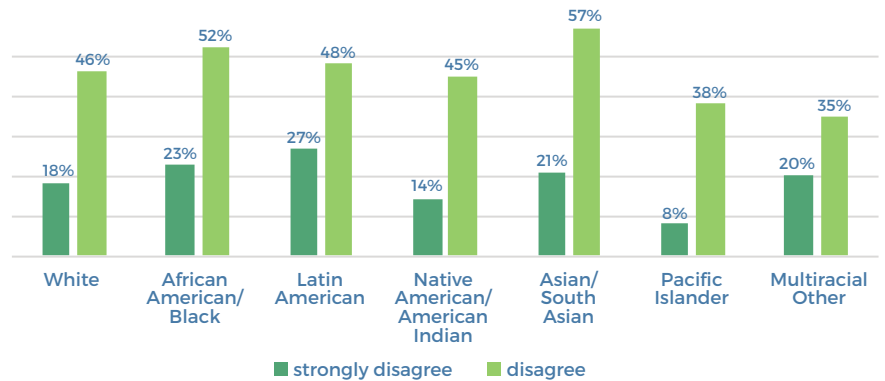

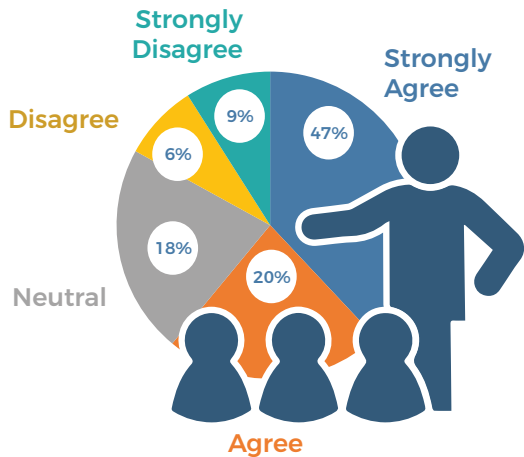

Observably, 46% of Pacific Islanders Strongly agree or Agree that they receive support for their self-care and mental health differing from just over 60% across all other racial/ethnic groups.

23% of CHWs in East North Central report that they Strongly disagree or Disagree in the statement that they receive support for their 'self-care and mental health where' they work, which is observably different compared to other regions.

SELF CARE (CONTINUED)

Receive coaching and support to grow my career as a CHW

51% of CHWs in East North Central, 53% of CHWs in Pacific, 50% of CHWs in Mountain, 51% of West North Central, 51% of CHWs in Mid Atlantic, 53% of CHWs in New England as compared to 62% of CHWs in South Atlantic, 63% of CHWs in East South Central, and 65% of CHWs in West South Central Strongly agree or Agree that they receive coaching and support to grow in their career as a CHW

The NACHW Advance CHWs project began in 2021 and is funded by Johnson and Johnson to advance the national professional identity, policy leadership and organizational capacity of Community Health Workers. CHWs is used as an umbrella term to describe community health representatives, promotores, aunties, outreach workers, peers and dozens of different work titles. CHWs are a diverse, capable, proven, frontline public health workforce, whose trust and cultural alignment with marginalized communities facilitates their roles as community educators, capacity builders, advocates and liaisons between under-resourced communities and health and social services systems (APHA, 2014).

CHWs' integration within medical, public health and social service initiatives are essential to eradicate racial and social injustice and health inequities disproportionately experienced by people of color. This data should be used for action to reverse harmful practices and barriers to CHW self-determination, leadership advancement and sustainability.

The survey, analysis and narratives were developed by NACHW staff and CHW leaders from across the country who are part of the Advance CHWs Project. Special thanks to our advisors and contributors to project phases. To learn more about the CHWs in this project and download all infographics and the full report please visit <https://nachw.org/advancechwsproject/>

SELF CARE (CONTINUED)

I have a dedicated supervisor who provides daily support for my CHW role

46% of Pacific Islander CHWs, 55% of Multiracial CHWs, 59% of Native American/ American Indian CHWs Strongly agree or Agree that they have a dedicated supervisor who provides daily support for their CHW role as compared to 75% of Black/AA CHWs, 75% of Hispanic/Latino CHWs, 64% of white CHWs.

53% of West North Central Strongly agree or Agree that they have a dedicated supervisor who provides daily support for their role as a CHW compared to 71% of CHWs in the West South Central who Strongly agree or Agree.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR ACTION

- Promote CHW stories of self-care and wellness for mental health in employment environments and scale practices across networks and employers.
- Elevate strategies to sustain daily support for CHWs through appropriate supervision in the workplace
- State health departments should partner with CHW Networks to collect data on self-care and mental health needs of CHWs across the state
- Funders should provide grants to CHW Networks to ensure that self-care and mental health support is made available in training and membership settings